How modal verbs work

Modal verbs (can, could, may, might, must, should, will, would) add meaning like ability, permission, obligation or probability to another verb — and they follow special grammar rules.

Form: modal + base verb: She can swim (never 'to swim' or 'swims')

No -s / no do: He must go (not 'musts'); negatives and questions without 'do': Can you...? You shouldn't...

Ability: can / could: I can drive. She could read at age four.

Obligation: must / have to: You must wear a seatbelt. | Prohibition: mustn't

Advice: should / shouldn't: You should see a doctor.

Possibility: may / might / could: It might rain later.
