When I was a child, my family used to go camping every summer. We used to sleep in a small tent by a lake. Last July, we went there again. The weather was warm and sunny on Friday, so we swam in the lake all afternoon. In the evening, my dad cooked sausages on a small fire. We told stories until it was dark.

On Saturday morning, the sky was grey. While we were eating breakfast, the wind started to blow. Then it began to rain. My mum was washing the cups when we heard thunder. We ran to the car and waited inside. The storm was very loud, and my little sister was crying. Nobody wanted to get out of the car.

After an hour, the rain stopped. The tent was wet, but the sun came out again. We put our wet clothes on the trees and had a cold lunch. Later that day, we saw a beautiful rainbow over the lake. It was an exciting weekend, and we never forgot it.
